ELECTRONIC BOOKS

The Library has over 130 books on the Web via the StatRef and MD Consult systems. All books are listed in and linked from the Library's WebVoyage online catalog. While some core titles are duplicated in hard copy for backup purposes for both practical reasons and per Joint Commission standards, an increasing number of books are being acquired exclusively in Web format. As well as being available on-campus, the Library's electronic books can be accessed from anywhere by going through the Library's home page (<http://library.uthct.edu>).

"SEND TO" FEATURE IN PUBMED

PubMed's "Send To" pulldown feature offers a variety of ways to display, print, and transmit your search results, including the following:

Text – displays the results in a pure text format with no graphics, colors, or links. An excellent way to save ink or toner if printing.

File – allows you to save search results as a text file.

Printer – displays results for printing with no graphics.

Clipboard – sends results to the Clipboard. Great for temporarily saving the selected results of multiple related searches. Also eliminates any duplicate references.

E-Mail – Allows you to send search results to any email address. Be sure to use the full internet e-mail address (i.e. thomas.craig@utcht.edu) even if on campus. Results are sent from the National Center for Biotechnology and will have a generic subject line ("PubMed Search Results"). Notes or messages can be added to the e-mail.
